this handbook re examines the concept of early modern history in a european and global context the term early modern has been familiar especially in anglophone scholarship for four decades and is securely established in teaching research and scholarly publishing more recently however the unity implied in the notion has fragmented while the usefulness and even the validity of the term and the historical periodisation which it incorporates have been questioned the oxford handbook of early modern european history 1350 1750 provides an account of the development of the subject during the past half century but primarily offers an integrated and comprehensive survey of present knowledge together with some suggestions as to how the field is developing it aims both to interrogate the notion of early modernity itself and to survey early modern europe as an established field of study the overriding aim will be to establish that early modern is not simply a chronological label but possesses a substantive integrity volume i examines peoples and place assessing structural factors such as climate printing and the revolution in information social and economic developments and religion including chapters on orthodoxy judaism and islam discusses diarists such as samuel cole davis charles osborn lewis and clark zebulon pike henry rowe schoolcraft john charles fremont margaret van horn dwight bell francis parkman washington irving john j audubon james gallatin james k polk philip hone john quincy adams ralph waldo emerson and amos bronson alcott
